9/11 Trials In N.Y.C. Draw Fire

Partisan divide grows over trying suspects near WTC

WASHINGTON | Bringing those accused in the Sept. 11 attacks to New York for trial would increase the security threat to the city and give radical Islamists a platform to propagate their ideology, former New York mayor Rudy Giuliani said Sunday.

Giuliani's view that the Obama administration is erring in trying Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and four others near the site of the World Trade Center was echoed by other Republicans on the Sunday news programs.

Republicans argued that the five are war criminals and should be tried in the military tribunals where other Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, detainees will be judged.

"What the Obama administration is telling ... is that both in substance and reality the war on terror, from their point of view, is over," Giuliani said. Moving the case to a civilian court, he said, "seems to be an over-concern with the rights of terrorists and a lack of concern for the rights of the public."

Democrats defended the decision of Attorney General Eric Holder to try the five in New York, where more than 2,000 civilians were killed on Sept. 11, 2001. If someone murders Americans in this country, they should be tried in the U.S., said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. (AP)

Authorities say a Waco, Texas, woman lied about having breast cancer and spent $10,000 raised at a benefit to have her breasts enlarged. Police say that 24-year-old Trista Joy Lathern shaved her head to look like a cancer patient undergoing chemotherapy. Lathern allegedly wanted breast implants to save her seven-month marriage. Illinois Seeks Inmates From Gitmo

Legislators: Transfer of detainees to prison would bring new jobs

CHICAGO | Gov. Pat Quinn and U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin on Sunday tried to build support and counter criticism of a proposal to sell a prison in rural Illinois to the federal government to house Guantanamo Bay detainees and other inmates.

Federal officials are expected to visit the maximum security Thomson Correctional Center, about 150 miles west of Chicago, on Monday.

Both Quinn and Durbin said the possibility of selling the prison to the federal government was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to help create about 3,000 jobs.

"We have an opportunity to bring thousands of good-paying jobs to Illinois when we need them the most," Durbin said at a news conference in Chicago, one of several Illinois stops Sunday.

Thomson has been largely vacant since its construction in 2001 because of budget woes. The prison was built with 1,600 cells, but only about 200 minimum security inmates are held there.

Durbin said fewer than 100 of the inmates at Thomson would be Guantanamo Bay detainees if the Federal Bureau of Prisons buys the facility. Federal officials would even erect a more secure perimeter around the prison to beef up security, he added.

Local and state officials will be at Thomson on Monday for an inspection by the Federal Bureau of Prisons and Department of Defense representatives.

Alaska Fights Species Rule

State pursues lawsuit to end protection for polar bear population

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA | Alaska Gov. Sean Parnell says he has the best interest of polar bears at heart, but he doesn't intend to let the federal government's expanded protection for bears get in the way of the state's continued prosperity.

Like his predecessor, Sarah Palin, the governor is suing the federal government to overturn the listing of the iconic symbol of the Arctic as a threatened species, a move made last year that he thinks could threaten Alaska's lifeblood:

U.S. FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE/AP

The government added the polar bear to the threatened species list in 2008.

petroleum development.

"Currently, some are attempting to improperly use the Endangered Species Act to shut down resource development," Parnell says. "I'm not going to let this happen on my watch."

As Alaska North Slope wells dry up, the state is turning to potential offshore discoveries to refill the trans-Alaska pipeline and ensure the long-term prospects of a $26 billion proposed pipeline. Protections for polar bears under the Endangered Species Act could thwart that, Parnell says, adding that they're not needed.

"Alaskans have an excellent track record of both developing our natural resources and protecting our wildlife," says Parnell, who replaced Palin when she resigned in late July. DAN JOLING (AP)

Dobbs: CNN Split 'Amicable'

Host considering run for office after abrupt exit from news station

NEW YORK | Lou Dobbs says he doesn't feel like he was pushed out of CNN, the cable television news organization where he worked for all but two years of its existence until last Wednesday.

"I don't know if people will believe it, but we had a very amicable parting on the best of terms," he said in an interview over the weekend. "I spent 29 years there building that company, and I wish everyone there nothing but the best, and they have reciprocated with me."

He announced his resignation on his evening show, "Lou Dobbs Tonight," finished the newscast and walked out of CNN.

Lou Dobbs says he'll take time to weigh his options now that he's split from CNN.

It's hard to know whether the abruptness or the lack of rancor surrounding the exit was more noteworthy. Dobbs' outspokenness had made him a political target, particularly from Latino groups — so much so that there were parties celebrating Dobbs' departure over the weekend.

Dobbs said he will take weeks — perhaps months — to sift through ideas before deciding his next step.

The future could include journalism. He said his separation agreement didn't have a non-compete clause, something TV news organizations frequently use to keep people off the air for a while. Dobbs denied reports that he had met with Fox News chief Roger Ailes or had talked to anyone at Fox about a job.

A run for public office also interests him.

"I know certain things that are immutable, and one of them is that I'm going to be engaged in the public arena," Dobbs said.

U.S. Charities Fear Holiday Letdown

Survey indicates there won't be an increase in giving at year's end

SEATTLE | American charities have weathered a significant drop in giving this year, and while they're hoping for a holiday miracle, a recent survey shows they will probably see a decrease in year-end generosity.

In light of the economic downturn, only 38 percent of Americans say they are more likely to give a charitable gift as a holiday present this year, compared to 49 percent last year, according to a survey conducted by Harris Interactive to be released Monday.

Some of the biggest U.S. charities say they are budgeting for a disappointing Christmas.

The survey indicates they are prudent to not raise their expectations for now. The survey did find, however, that 74 percent of Americans plan to increase their charitable giving once the economy improves.

The nation's most successful fundraising organizations expected to see their income decline by an average of 9 percent in 2009, according to the Chronicle of Philanthropy.

Times are doubly tough this year for nonprofits because the need for their services is increasing while donations are decreasing.

Obama Juggles Pressures in Asia

President is expected to raise human rights issues on China visit

SHANGHAI | Arriving in China for a three-day visit, President Obama finds himself under the microscope on whether he intends to take up the issue of human rights with Beijing more directly than he has so far.

In addition to the economic issues that dominated the president's earlier stops in Tokyo and Singapore, which will also loom large in China, Obama has to juggle America's own self-image as a champion of liberty and China's steadfast resistance to outside meddling in its affairs.

Human rights activists have been alarmed by Obama's delicate approach to date. In October, he became the first president in nearly two decades not to meet with the Dalai Lama during a visit to Washington by the exiled Tibetan leader.

In the most significant address of his eight-day Asia trip, in Japan on Saturday, Obama did not mention Tibet or Xinjiang, two minority regions of China that have been racked by particularly serious protests and severe crackdowns over the past two years.

But Obama did call for the release of Burmese dissident leader Aung San Suu Kyi, who has spent most of the past 20 years either in jail or under house arrest. Obama repeated the demand Sunday in front of the Burmese prime minister at an economic summit in Singapore. He made the appeal just hours before leaving Singapore for China, which has long had close diplomatic, business and military ties with the Burmese junta.

Obama flew on Sunday night to Shanghai, where he was scheduled to hold a town hall-style meeting with university students on Monday morning.

From Shanghai, Obama heads to Beijing, where he will hold meetings with Chinese President and Communist Party boss Hu Jintao on Monday night and Tuesday morning. Obama is expected to raise human rights issues directly in those meetings, said Jeffrey Bader, Obama's National Security Council Director for East Asian Affairs. ANNE E. An employee announces the winners of a bingo game at Baghdad's Alwiyah Club. As violence has dropped in the Iraqi capital, the elite social club has filled up again.

Baghdad Bounces Back With Bingo

Fun-seekers return to social club as Iraqi capital embraces calm

BAGHDAD | It's Saturday night at the Alwiyah Club, and 21-year-old Sarah al-Kimackchy is doing the hip thing — playing bingo.

The streets outside may still not be as safe as they once were, and the occasional bombing still rips through Baghdad, but al-Kimackchy is here with her family and fixated on her game.

After years of bombings and killings, Baghdad's 85-year-old elite social club is making a comeback — and there's no better evidence of that than the open bar, the deafening Arabic pop music and the Saturday night bingo games that draw hundreds of fun-seekers.

While it is only a small snapshot of Iraq, bingo mania reflects the growing sense of security in Baghdad and the resurgence of a community that wants no part of the religious divisions that almost destroyed the city. They are Sunnis, Shiites, Christians — and nobody seems to care.

Founded when Iraq was ruled by Britain, the Alwiyah's lawns, swimming pool and bar were long the gathering place of the elite.

It continued to thrive under Saddam Hussein until the early 1990s, when the dictator cut the country's booze supply.

After the 2003 U.S.-led invasion, the Alwiyah started rebuilding itself, said Kadam Mokdady, vice president of the club. The turning point was 2008, when violence in Iraq dropped dramatically.

"It wasn't really a family club as such until 2008," said Mokdady. "Since then, it has become almost back to normal." REBECCA SANTANA (AP)

Serb Orthodox Patriarch Pavle Dies

BELGRADE, SERBIA | Serbian Orthodox Church Patriarch Pavle, who called for peace and conciliation during the Balkan ethnic wars of the 1990s but failed to openly condemn extreme Serb nationalism, died Sunday. He was 95.

Stalled Talks Frustrate Palestinians

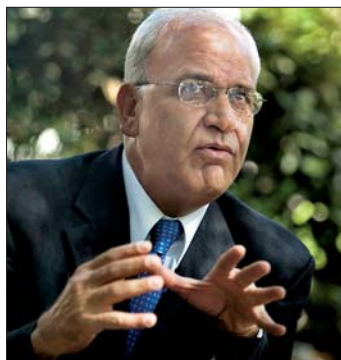

Top negotiator plans appeal to U.N. to back an independent state

JERUSALEM | A Palestinian drive to ask the U.N. Security Council to endorse a state unilaterally, put forward by a top negotiator Sunday, appeared to be more an expression of frustration with U.S. and Israeli policies and stalled peace talks than a real effort to go it alone.

A resolution for a Palestinian state could face a veto from the U.S., Israel's main ally. But if the Security Council approved it, consequences could be even more severe.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu rejected the move, warning Israel would retaliate.

"There is no substitute for negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians," Netanyahu said in a speech at the Saban Forum in Jerusalem Sunday evening, saying he wanted a full peace agree-

Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat may appeal to the U.N. for a Palestinian state.

Then he warned, "Any unilateral action would only unravel the framework of agreements between us and can only lead to one-sided steps on the part of Israel."

He did not elaborate further, but an Israeli legal expert said if the Palestinians move ahead by themselves, Israel would be within its rights to cancel interim peace accords, which regulate daily life between the two sides.

The Palestinians are upset over the continued expansion of Israeli settlements in the West Bank and east Jerusalem, and are disappointed with the U.S. failure to put pressure on Israel to halt the construction.

The lack of progress led Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas to threaten to quit politics earlier this month.

But last week, election officials postponed the vote indefinitely, saying that the militant Islamic Hamas' control of the Gaza Strip made it impossible to proceed. In the West Bank Sunday, officials in Abbas' Fatah Party said they would meet next month to extend his term indefinitely.

Robertson Puts McDonnell in Bind

Religious broadcaster may be liability to Va. gov.-elect as a donor

Fresh off his landslide victory in the race for Virginia governor, Robert F. McDonnell is already being forced to confront how he plans to handle his friendship with minister Pat Robertson, a longtime ally but also a highly controversial figure, once he takes office.

Virginia Muslims are calling on McDonnell, a Republican, to disavow comments made by the Virginia Beach religious broadcaster last week in response to the shootings at Fort Hood, Texas, in which Robertson asserted that Islam is "not a religion" but a "violent political system" and that those who practice it should be treated like members of a communist or fascist party.

Robertson has made similar assertions about Islam before, but the recent comments came only a couple weeks after he made a late $25,000 donation to McDonnell's campaign. During the campaign, McDonnell played down his ties to Robertson, who he has known since he attended the law school Robertson founded in the late 1980s.

But Robertson's comments last week suggest he might prove to be a continuing political liability for McDonnell as he seeks to turn his bipartisan campaign promises into a governing coalition. Now assembling his administration before his Jan. 16 inauguration, McDonnell is under close scrutiny from Democrats and others to see how he balances his allegiances to the social conservatives who helped elect him with his pledges to spend most of his time in office focused on jobs and the economy.

"McDonnell has tried to suggest he should be judged on his own actions and not on Robertson's comments," said Virginia political analyst Robert D. Holsworth. "But the fact of the matter is he does have a major contributor who has made these comments. He will not be able to simply say 'no comment,' forever." ROSALIND S. HELDERMAN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Rhee Says She'd Feel Responsible For Fenty '10 Loss

WASHINGTON | D.C. Schools Chancellor Michelle Rhee says that if Mayor Adrian Fenty isn't re-elected in 2010, she will feel responsible.

Rhee made the statement Friday at a schools summit. She was responding to a question from a Washington Post reporter.

The reporter asked Rhee how responsible she would feel "if Mayor Fenty were not re-elected?"

Rhee said she'd feel "very responsible. I mean, when he hired me into this job, he told me that his No. 1 priority [was] that he was willing to risk his entire political career in the pursuit of trying to fix the schools." (AP)

Boy Fatally Shot in D.C. Apartment

WASHINGTON | A boy younger than 10 was shot and killed Saturday night in the Columbia Heights area of Northwest Washington.

D.C. police said the boy was killed inside his apartment in the 1400 block of Columbia Road by a shot that apparently came through the door.

Authorities said the shot was fired shortly before 10 p.m. during a dispute in the hallway outside the boy's apartment.

Police were in the area in connection with the department's All Hands on Deck initiative and arrived at the apartment quickly, authorities said.

They said three people were being questioned late Saturday night. D.C. Council member Jim Graham, D-Ward 1, who was among the officials who went to the scene, noted the irony in the child's death. "Here's a boy in the safety of his own home," and yet he was killed, Graham said. The child's age was unclear. Some sources said he was 7; others said 9.

Use the Card, Check It Twice

The holiday season is the best time of year for retailers — and for would-be thieves

NEW YORK | Your new frugal life-style is about to be tested by the biggest consumer challenge of the year — holiday shopping.

For many, part of the strategy for keeping on budget includes leaving the credit cards at home and using a debit card at the check-out instead. But before heading out to the stores with debit card in hand, make sure you understand the risks. Relying on a card that links directly to your bank accounts could create more financial problems than high interest rates if the card is lost or stolen.

If you decide to use a debit card for gift spending, it's important to keep close tabs on your card and your accounts to reduce the chances that you'll become a victim of identity theft. Here are some tips to keep your money safe this holiday season and year-round.

Some shoppers try to stay on a budget by using a debit card for all their gift buying.

Empty Your Wallet

Pickpocketing increases during the holidays. Make sure you aren't carrying any cards you don't need, and keep those at home in a secure location.

Keep Your Card in Sight

Don't use your debit card in places such as restaurants or bars, where it's taken away to process the transaction. There's a bigger chance that it could be put through a "skimmer," a device thieves use to read the information on the card. Even when a purchase is handled in front of you, be alert for unusual behavior such as multiple swipes of your card.

Be Cautious With ATMs

Freestanding, non-bank ATMs are more vulnerable than those located at bank branches. And even bank machines can have skimming devices attached. These devices vary from plastic gadgets slipped on top of the card slot to fake keypads. Thieves may also plant tiny cameras in hard-to-notice spots to record your PIN number as you punch it in. If something seems unusual, don't use the machine.

Protect Your PIN

Take a look around to make sure no one is watching before using an ATM or entering your PIN, said Gregory B. Meyer of Meriwest Credit Union in San Jose, Calif. Cover your hand if you must.

Check Your Balances

It's hard to prevent fraud from occurring, but vigilance can catch a problem before it balloons out of control, said Robert Reh, chief information officer for Nassau Financial Federal Credit Union in Westbury, N.Y. If there are suspect transactions, contact your bank or credit union right away. You're more likely to be covered for any fraudulent activity if you report it quickly. EILEEN AJ CONNELLY (AP)

PERSONAL FINANCE

EMPLOYMENT

With the U.S. economy still struggling to recover, anyone can find themselves out of work in the blink of an eye. Here are two important things to keep in mind if you get a pink slip.

1 Tap your ex-employer for assistance.

Getting laid off can be so stunning that the tendency is to walk away and say you'll figure things out on your own. But many companies offer help beyond the basic severance package, such as access to legal counsel or clients and out-placement resources.

2 Secure your health insurance. Don't scrimp by forgoing health insurance. The biggest error made by laid-off workers is giving up the coverage known as COBRA, according to Jim Pogue, senior vice president of group benefits for Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America. "Saving by not paying for your COBRA or keeping health care for your family can ultimately lead you into financial ruin," Pogue says. DAVE CARPENTER (AP)

Betts powers offense, punter scores again in third win of season

REDSKINS | Behind an offense that finally broke the 17-point ceiling, and thanks to a defense that came up with a key turnover, the Washington Redskins snapped a four-game losing streak to down the Denver Broncos, 27-17, on Sunday afternoon.

With top back Clinton Portis sidelined because of a concussion, backup Ladell Betts continued to give a spark in the running game, helping provide the difference in front of an announced crowd of 85,247.

Betts' one-yard touchdown run with 2 minutes, 44 seconds remaining in the game gave the Redskins (3-6) their first lead. Then the Redskins' defense closed well and completed its second-half shutout against the Broncos and overmatched backup quarterback Chris Simms.

"We had a desert experience for the last few weeks," coach Jim Zorn said. "It was very arid, if you will. You almost don't know how to feel, but we remembered very quickly. ... I felt good about savoring it for a day at least."

Simms threw four incomplete passes, and the Broncos (6-3) turned over the ball on downs with 2:14 showing on the game clock. After starting the season 6-0 under rookie coach Josh McDaniels, the Broncos have lost three straight.

Fortunately for the Redskins, their secret offensive weapon

Ladell Betts breaks through the line for a long fourth-quarter first down run that set up the winning touchdown against Denver.

TRICK SHOT: Redskins punter Hunter Smith celebrates with Will Montgomery after a successful fake and touchdown pass to Mike Sellers in the second quarter.

“We had a desert experience for the last few weeks. It was very arid.”

returned to the lineup: punter Hunter Smith. Sidelined last week because of a recurring groin problem, Smith again delivered as the Redskins succeeded with some special teams trickery in the second quarter to stun the Broncos and briefly pull even at 14-14.

Campbell and Yoder teamed on a short touchdown pass in the first quarter, and Washington scored its second touchdown on Smith's 35-yard pass to Mike Sellers with 6:39 to play in the half. The Redskins appeared to move into posi-

BEST CALL: After showing their hand on a trick play, the Redskins called a timeout and followed through with the fake field goal anyway, and it worked.

WORST CALL: On fourth and one in the third, the Redskins ran a stretch play that failed, instead of attempting a field goal that would have tied the game.

BEST ADJUSTMENT: This was more luck than intent. When Orton got injured, forcing the Broncos to turn to Chris Simms, the defense never let him get comfortable.

A The offense was solid, the defense excelled, and the Redskins beat a good team.

tion to give Suisham a chance at a 53-yard field goal, but Washington changed its alignment before the snap — showing a potential fake with Smith lined up to receive the snap — and Washington called its second timeout.

Out of the break in play, the Redskins again lined up in a field-goal formation — and again switched up things. This time, however, the ball was snapped to Smith, who rolled to his right as the play unfolded with Sellers, who started on the right side, looping around to the left and down the field uncovered.

Smith made a nice throw to Sellers for the touchdown, which was Smith's second on special teams this season. He rushed for a touchdown in the season-opening loss to the New York Giants while holding for Suisham on another fake.

Bengals Smother Steelers

Cincinnati completes season sweep, takes over atop AFC North

NFL | Finally, after 40 years of being pushed around and dominated by the Pittsburgh Steelers, the Cincinnati Bengals refused to be bullied anymore.

The Bengals beat the Steelers at their own game in their own stadium, relying on a defense that smothered Ben Roethlisberger and the Super Bowl champions by holding them to four field goals and one big special teams play for an 18-12 victory Sunday that put them in control of the AFC North.

Shayne Graham kicked four field goals in the second half even as the Bengals (7-2) failed to convert opportunity after opportunity to take control. Bernard Scott's 96-yard kickoff return in

Panthers Harass Ryan, Hold off Falcons, 28-19

NFL | Matt Ryan twice seemed poised to lead Atlanta on the winning drive. First, his kicker let him down. Then his sophomore troubles popped up again.

Ryan's late interception ended the Falcons' hopes Sunday as the Carolina Panthers held on for a 28-19 win.

Jake Delhomme went turn-over-free for the third-straight game, finding Steve Smith for two touchdowns as the Panthers (4-5) built a 21-10 half-time lead.

But the win wasn't sealed until Richard Marshall picked off Ryan, setting up Jonathan Stewart's 45-yard touchdown run with 2:07 left. (AP)

Tiger Wins Down Under

Woods shoots birdies early, hangs on to win Australian Masters

GOLF | Tiger Woods gave record crowds at Kingston Heath what they wanted to see — exquisite shots and a closing round of 4-under 68 to win the Australian Masters on Sunday for his seventh victory of the year.

In his first trip Down Under in 11 years, Woods put on quite a show for his $3 million appearance fee.

three birdies on his opening six holes, then seized control with a tee shot to a back pin on the par-3 15th that covered the flag and stopped 6 feet away.

“You had to make some birdies early, and I was able to do that,” Woods said. “I kept it going most of the day.”

Thanks to the fast start, he wound up with a two-shot victory over Greg Chalmers, who couldn't keep pace along the back nine.

Woods has won 82 times around the world and in 13 countries at official tournaments. It was his first victory in Australia, where the government estimates its return on paying half of his appearance fee was about $20 million. (AP)

USC Drops, Stanford Soars High in AP Poll

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Southern California has tumbled to its worst ranking in the AP college football poll since the Trojans began their current run of 128 consecutive weeks in the Top 25 back in 2002.

Meanwhile, Stanford soared up the poll on the strength of a dominant performance against the Trojans.

USC is No. 22, dropping 11 spots after losing 55-21 to the Cardinal. The Trojans had not been ranked lower than 13th since 2002, Pete Carroll's second season as coach.

Stanford jumped 11 places to No. 14, its best ranking since being No. 11 in the last regular-season poll of 2001.

Florida remained No. 1, and Alabama leapfrogged Texas into the No. 2 spot of the Top 25 released Sunday. (AP)

Perfect Brand of Crazy

Shakira is wild and wonderful on her Neptunes-produced album, 'She Wolf'

MUSIC | If Lady Gaga thought she was the craziest woman in the music business, she should probably listen to Shakira's "She Wolf," out tomorrow, to fully understand her competition. Or, at least try to.

Because while Gaga has made a name for herself with wacky outfits and blood-splattered performances, Shakira's third English studio album is quite possibly the most bizarrely catchy thing we've heard all year. Punctuated with panting, driven by an electropop sound masterminded by the Neptunes and chock-full of lyrics about doing the nasty, this is not an album you want to play in the car with your mom.

expressnightout

Things start off with the album's title track and first single, "She Wolf." If you haven't heard the song by now, then you live under a rock — infectiously danceable and wonderfully funky, the song takes disco and smacks it on the head, rejuvenating the much-hated genre with a sense of puppy-like

There are lots of moans on the album — like on the thumpingly tribal "Long Time," which has the Neptunes using pounding drums and yelled call-and-response sections to channel some ethnic flair; and on the bass-heavy, very Middle-Eastern-sounding "Why Wait," on which Shakira assures her lover, "There's nothing in the world/You can think of/That I won't do to you."

As soon as the Neptunes are out of the production picture, though, "She Wolf" takes a turn for the worse. First, there's the weirdly Matt Damon-bashing "Men in This Town," in which Shakira angrily proclaims, "The good ones are gone or not able/And Matt Damon's not meant for me/Damon's not meant for me, dammit!" If that random burst against Will Hunting wasn't enough, the song then breaks down into a random rapping section, where Shakira spits "I'm so fresh, I'm so clean" over and over again, and ends with some totally unlistenable high-pitched lyrics about how "It's a suicide waiting all this time." Four minutes of your life you won't get back.

If it weren't for Pharrell and co., "She Wolf" would be nothing more than a hodgepodge of random tracks — thanks to the Neptunes, however, the album is quite certainly one of the most ferocious of the year. Put the she wolf back in the closet during most of the album's second half, and you'll be fine. ROXANA HADADI

"Anvil! The Story of Anvil" is nominated.

The IDA picks its nominees for 2009's best documentary

TRUTH | "Afghan Star," "Anvil! The Story of Anvil," "Diary of a Times Square Thief," "Food, Inc." and "Mugabe and the White African" are the nominees for the International Documentary Association's 2009 IDA Awards.

The award will be handed out at a ceremony at the Directors Guild of America on Dec. 4 hosted by Ira Glass of "This American Life."

Nominations also were announced Thursday in short film and limited series categories.

A "Courage Under Fire" tribute will be presented to Current Media journalists Laura Ling and Euna Lee, who were arrested by North Korean soldiers while filming a story about the trafficking of North Korean women along the Tumen River. Sentenced to 12 years of hard labor, they were pardoned after a visit to the country by ex-president Bill Clinton.

BOX OFFICE Dollars for Doom The global-disaster tale "2012" opened at No. 1 domestically with $65 million and pulled in $225 million worldwide. The Sony Pictures action saga tells the story of a scramble to save remnants of humanity aboard giant arks as Earth's crust shifts and floodwaters pour over most of the planet. With a cast led by John Cusack, Danny Glover and Chiwetel Ejiofor, "2012" was directed by doomsday specialist Roland Emmerich ("Independence Day," "The Day After Tomorrow"). (AP) COMMAND CENTRAL: A new online, massively multiplayer "Star Trek" game will let players choose from 20 bridge styles.

Boldly Going Live

Combat Klingons, explore new worlds, and meet others in 'Star Trek Online'

GAME | The most iconic setting in "Star Trek" almost didn't make it into the series' online video game.

The developers at Cryptic Studios were focusing on re-creating the sci-fi franchise's universe for "Star Trek Online," the upcoming massively multiplayer online game that boldly casts players as captains of their own starship. Yet they were leaving out a crucial location: the bridge. Despite their initial hesitation, the game's masterminds decided to make it so.

"We didn't want to have interiors at launch," said "Star Trek Online" executive producer Craig Zinkievich. "We thought it was just a little bit too much. We really wanted to make sure we delivered a really deep experience, but your bridge not being in the game, it really felt like a hole in the game, and it was just something that we had to put in."

“It's familiar, but it's new. We've changed a few things and added a few things to the universe.”

When players design their virtual vessels, they can choose from about 20 bridges — like one resembling the command centers aboard the famed Enterprises or the brawny Defiant from "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine." Zinkievich said the bridges will mostly function as social hubs where gamers can hang out with their bridge officers and other captains online.

The game is set 22 years after the supernova that destroyed the Romulan homeworld and transported an elder Spock and the villainous Nero into director J.J. Abrams' reimagined "Star Trek." Peace between the Federation and Klingons has since evaporated, meaning space combat will play a vital role in the game, though there are still strange new worlds to explore.

"It's familiar, but it's new," said Zinkievich. "We've changed a few things and added a few things to the universe. I think that's what keeps us from stepping on the hardcore Trekkies' toes."

"Star Trek Online" is scheduled to be released on Feb. 2.

SERIES 'Scrubs: The Early Years' The CW is going to medical school with "HMS," an ensemble drama about a group of bright students at Harvard Medical School. The show marks the producing debut of "Heroes" star Hayden Panettiere, who is an co-executive producer. The drama is said to have a younger "Grey's Anatomy" vibe to it. (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

Center of the Tween World

Justin Bieber earns the love of his peers as his infectious pop makes global waves

Q&A | A year ago, Justin Bieber was a kid from Toronto who had a gift for singing sweet-natured covers of Usher hits. Today, Bieber could be the biggest tween heartthrob in music. After signing with Island Records, with the support of his mentor, Usher, the 15-year-old released his debut single, "One Time," in the summer and almost instantly turned his online audience into an army of dedicated fans.

"Bieber mania," as his management now calls it, has spread so quickly that NBC says more than 2,000 people attended his Oct.

12 "Today" performance at New York's Rockefeller Plaza — the largest crowd for any artist this year, including Miley Cyrus.

With his debut album, "My World," due out tomorrow, Bieber reflects on his whirlwind of a year, the experience of recording and co-writing his album, and how he stays connected with fans.

When did you first think you might have a talent for music?

I've always loved music, especially percussion. ... I'm a big fan of Travis Barker. My mom bought me my first drum kit when I was 4 because I was banging on everything around the house, even couches. I picked up the guitar when I was 6 and taught myself to play, but I didn't really start singing until I was 10.

Justin Bieber isn't just any teen heartthrob — he's singer Usher's protege.

Your first three singles are about young love. What are the rest of the "My World" songs like?

Most are about love and stuff that girls can appreciate, but I also co-wrote a song called "Down to Earth." It's a ballad about the feelings I had when my parents split up and how I helped my family get through it. I think a lot of kids have had their parents split up, and they should know that it wasn't because of something they did. I hope people can relate to it.

Do you still keep up with your fans on YouTube?

Oh, definitely. I think the Internet is the best way to reach your fans. A couple of years back, artists didn't have that tool, so why not use it now? I'm also on Facebook, and my fans got together and sent me a get-well card on Twitter when I was sick the other day. That was really cool. For now, I'm too worried about getting too close to the fans. I don't share much personal information.

I picked up the guitar when I was 6 and taught myself to play, but I didn't start singing until I was 10.

What has been the biggest change for you in the past year?

I've gained a lot more fans, and I'm able to travel a lot more. I went to the U.K. for the first time in the summer, and hundreds of girls came out to see me. I wasn't totally surprised, because a lot of the people who comment on my YouTube videos are from overseas, but I still had no idea that many people would come. MONICA HERRERA (BILLBOARD.COM)

1 Mysteries of Will

You might think that no one could possibly have anything new to say about Shakespeare, but HA! There's always something new to say about Shakespeare. NPR reporter and "literary detective" Paul Collins will be speaking at Folger tonight about his new tome, "Book of William: How Shakespeare's First Folio Conquered the World." Collins is an engaging, funny writer who clearly loves literature, so this should be worth the time. f.z.

3 All High Points

The Flatlanders might not work quickly — four albums in 30 years — but they do work smartly. Jimmie Dale Gilmore, Joe Ely and Butch Hancock combine country-music harmonies, folk's social consciousness and the twangy power of roots rock, and the Texas trio brought their songwriting talents together again for 2009's "Hills and Valleys." It's their first CD in five years, but like everything the Flatlanders do, it was worth the wait. c.p.

2 The King of Horror

We're not sure why simulcasts have become so popular — but people still go to movies in theaters, and it's not so different. Tonight, the Shakespeare Theatre will be simulcasting an interview with Stephen King about his latest novel, "Under the Dome." Go find out what's behind the master storyteller's creative process — and, hey, make friends with some fellow King fans while you're at it. f.z.

'Chef Academy' gives low-key education to wannabe food gurus

LEARNING | There was a time when it was enough for a chef to be recognized for the quality of his food and the popularity of his restaurants. But now we live in an era when a man can be designated as "the world's sexiest chef." And Jean Christophe Novelli is that man. He's also the star, judge, jury and executioner on a new series called "Chef Academy" (11 p.m., Bravo).

The amateurs here are, well, very amateur. Only one has risen as high as an assistant chef. One man has been a Navy cook on a submarine for nine years. At least three call themselves housewives who simply want to do a better job in the kitchen and bring passion to their family dinners. The oldest of the group is a woman who appears to have spent too many of her 47 years in the sun.

While a few participants see this as a validation that may bring them professional advancement, "Academy" has a refreshing lack of cutthroat competition. The students actually seem to support each other. Even the elimination process seems more laid-back. Participants get three chances to fail before the chef shows them the door. B.I.O.

BY INVITATION ONLY: UPCOMING WEDDINGS & UNIONS

Dede Kane, Michael Zecher

Dede, 29, is a patent examiner.
Michael, 30, is a patent attorney.
They will live in D.C.

■ The Main Event: A semiformal, traditional ceremony in Washington on Dec. 5 with 100 guests in attendance.

■ Honeymoon: St. Maarten, where Michael's grandmother has a condo.

■ How They Met: They started working at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office on the same day in 2006.

■ First Impressions: "I thought she was friendly and very attractive."

■ First Date: Dinner and drinks at Tunnick's Tavern. "We enjoyed Bud Light. I think my beer choice impressed him, since he has a good friend who works for Budweiser. ... It's always been his favorite beer."

■ How He Proposed: One morning, he pulled off the GW Parkway onto an overlook. "Michael interrupted my rambling, grabbed my shoulders and turned me towards him. I then saw the ring box he had in his hand, and I almost fainted." When they got back into the car, he checked to make sure Dede had said yes: "He had been so overwhelmed, he wasn't even sure I had answered!"

■ Most-Hated Clothing Item: Her North Face fleece "covered in dog hair."

■ Stupidest Fight: "She got pissed at me because I told my roommate she cried at the end of 'Gran Torino.'"

■ Pet Names: He calls her "Double D."

■ Family Traditions: Dede says the women in her family have "fabulous taste in jewelry," so she'll be wearing her maternal great-grandmother's earrings, her mother's diamond clip and a bracelet that matches one her paternal great-grandmother used to own.

■ Celebrating Heritage: The ceremony's at Dede's church, and the reception's at the place her parents wed.

Chris Lee, Rebecca Schumer

Chris, 25, is an ophthalmology office assistant. Rebecca, 25, is a physical therapy grad student. They live in Falls Church.

■ The Main Event: On Oct. 10, 2010, they'll wed in Baltimore in front of 150 or so guests. Their wedding planner's husband will officiate.

■ How They Met: In college, when he called a foul on her intramural basketball team. "My team was all athletes, and we were playing a sorority team," she says. "We needed two points to win by default, and he called a technical foul on me!"

■ First Date: Swirl margaritas at Lauriol Plaza.

■ How He Proposed: She'd always wanted to go on a carriage ride in New York City, but Chris, a native New Yorker, said it was too touristy. Finally, in December 2008, he relented — and proposed as they passed Tavern on the Green. It was a very New York moment, says Rebecca: "We couldn't even take pictures because there were fire trucks everywhere!"

■ When He Knew: "When she came to New York for Christmas with my family and didn't run away!"

Banded for Life

CURTIS BATEMAN wanted to pop the question to NANCY PERSCH-BACHER with flair, so he got them into Breakfast With the Penguins at the Maryland Zoo in Baltimore. (Why not? Their first date was a visit to see baby Tai Shan at the National Zoo.) During the penguin talk, the zookeeper explained that penguins mate for life, and that the zoo puts bands on the penguins to show which penguin is mated to which. The keepers, who were in on Curtis' plan, "asked for volunteers to demonstrate the banding process. I didn't want to volunteer, but Curtis insisted. They put a band on Curtis and then he interrupted them and said he had his own band for me." "Her surprise at seeing me down on one knee was priceless," Curtis said.

Nancy, 28, is a collections manager at the International Spy Museum. Curtis, 26, is a collections manager at the IBEW Museum. They live in Alexandria and will marry Oct. 10, 2010, in Leesburg, Va.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Everyone is likely to notice what you're doing differently, and yet no one is likely to know exactly how you're getting it done.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) That which you cannot do on your own is likely to prove the most valuable endeavor — though it all depends on the right teammate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your creative juices may not be flowing as freely as usual at this time, but certain endeavors must be tackled right now, as best you can.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You'll notice how things are interrelated all day long, but one element may be conspicuous by its absence. What matters most?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The audience to which you play will be ready and willing to accept what you have to present — provided it's truly finished.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Steer clear of anyone who would have you do things their way. You want to be independent in all things — and you can be, for now.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You've been flirting with a major change, but you'll realize that success depends on the creative combination of the old and the new.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your stamina may not be what it has been, but you'll have just enough to stay in the race — until one of your rivals moves ahead of the pack.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Pleasure has its place, but you'll want to register certain tangible gains before saying that you're really enjoying yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Focus on domestic affairs. Financial matters may take up more of your time than expected, but the outcome can surely be favorable.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may be suspected of doing something entirely out of character. The facts will support your version of what happened, certainly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Are you ready for the change that is just around the corner? It may not seem dramatic, but it is likely to be felt for quite some time.
